ONCE AGAIN, EICHMANN, PLEADING FOR HIS LIFE BEFORE FIVE SUPREME COURT JUDGES IN JERUSALEM, ONE FROM KENTUCKY, AND SEEKING EXTRADITION TO WEST GERMANY, FACES THE INTERMINABLE LINE OF BLOOD KIN OF JEWS EVERYWHERE, DONE TO DEATH BY BARBARIAN HANDS OF THE PLUNDERING, DEHUMANIZED GERMANS

Adolph Eichmann is being judged in Jerusalem Court by a former Kentuckian, an expert in Talmudic Law, a former soldier, a taxation specialist, and a former army prosecutor.

While the three District Court judges who found Eichmann guilty were all born in German territory, only one of the Supreme Court judges who is hearing his appeal was born in Germany and two others got their legal education there, says the New York Herald Tribune correspondent, Alvin Rosenfeld. These are the members of the five-man Supreme Court panel:

Chief Justice Yitzhok Olshan, 67, born in Lithuania, settled in Palestine in 1912 and served in the World War I Jewish Legion. Educated in Palestine and at London University, he is a veteran lawyer and jurist. Justice Olshan, while almost curt in manner, is considered a man with a deep perception into human problems and a judge who is more interested in justice than in formulations, style, or fine points of law.

Justice Simon Agranat, 56, born in Louisville, Kentucky, U.S., educated at Chicago University, settled in Palestine in 1930 out of Zionist motivations. A judge for the past 22 years, he is considered a towering legal scholar imbued with Anglo-Saxon legal traditions.

Justice Moshe Silber, 61, born in a small Lithuanian town, educated in Jewish religious schools, and German universities, settled in Palestine in 1929. A Supreme Court justice for eleven years, and lecturer on Talmudic Law, he is considered to have an astonishing and wide-ranging knowledge, a fertile mind which skips ahead of lawyers appearing before him, and of deep roots in the intellectual and moral traditions of the Talmud.

Justice Joel Sussman, 51, born in Poland, educated in German and British universities, in legal practice in Palestine since 1938, military prosecutor during Israel's war of independence. He is said to have a great clarity of mind and an innate direct sense of justice. He often dissents on court decisions.

Justice Alfred Witkon, 52, born in Berlin, educated in German universities, practiced briefly in London, settled in Israel in 1935, a judge for the past 12 years, says the New York Herald Tribune. Israel's leading expert in tax law, he is considered to be cool, studious, a weigher of details and a judge of great conscience.

The attorney for Adolf Eichmann served notice before the Israeli Supreme Court that the former Nazi officer would appeal to the Council of Europe if he was not extradited to West Germany for trial, says the New York Times. Eichmann, looking as pale as ever if not quite so drawn and nervous as at his trial last year, sat in silence before the bench of five Supreme Court justices through the opening day of his appeal against the judgment and death sentence pronounced against him in December by another court.

That was a specially composed district court. It found Eichmann guilty of four counts of crimes against the Jewish people; three of crimes against humanity; and one war crime. Most of the counts related to Nazi efforts to annihilate the Jews of Europe.

In a session lasting four and a half hours, the counsel, Dr. Robert Servatius of West Germany, challenged the competence of Israeli courts to try Eichmann in view of what he contended was a succession of illegalities beginning with the kidnapping of his client in Argentina in May, 1960.

"It is not correct that an individual cannot defend himself against such a breach of law," Dr. Servatius declared. "The law of nations — the advanced law of nations — still has the duty of nations to give the individual a right to complain about a breach."

Dr. Servatius asked the court to call as a witness Dr. Hans Globke, Secretary of State in the Chancellery of West Germany, to establish what the defense counsel termed the impossibility of acting counter to orders in Nazi Germany.

Dr. Globke, who was ministerial adviser in the Ministry of Interior during the Nazi regime, has been the subject of much denunciation recently, most of it from Communist East Germany and the Soviet Union, for the part he played in drafting the Nuremberg laws and the Reich Citizenship Law, which were prejudicial to Jews, says the New York Times. Dr. Servatius also asked that the court permit him to bring Zvi Tohar and Yehuda Shimoni, employees of El Al, Israel's national airline, who were said to have been involved in the kidnapping of Eichmann.

"If it transpires from the testimony that the kidnappers acted officially," the counsel said, "the court will have to examine and decide the question if, under the circumstances, the authority to judge the accused exists."

"In the case of the accused, Eichmann, it is a known fact that there was compliance between those who kidnapped him and the state," he continued. "The state is the kidnapper in this case. The accused has no remedy and no court to refer to."

The defense counsel said it was inconceivable that the Supreme Court would support the ruling of the court that found Eichmann guilty that the breach of law in the kidnapping was a matter that could not be examined.

Dr. Servatius cited Article 5 of the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, which states: "Everyone has the right to liberty and the security of person."

The article adds, the defense counsel continued, that the freedom and security of man can be taken from him only by legally established authority in legal ways. Eichmann, he contended, was deprived of this fundamental right.

Dr. Servatius said the West German Government had not asked for Eichmann's extradition and the West German Foreign Ministry had refused Eichmann's request that it intervene, says the New York Times. The defense counsel said that he would take action in German courts against the Foreign Ministry's refusal to intervene and that if this action failed he would invoke Article 25 of the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, to which West Germany is a signatory.

Dr. Servatius quoted the article as saying:

"The Commission (of Human Rights) may receive petitions addressed to the Secretary General of the Council of Europe from any person . . . claiming to be the victim of a violation . . . of the rights set forth in this convention."

The court that tried Eichmann and sentenced him to death held that no international court existed that would try Eichmann for the offences attributed to him.

"But there is no need for an international court in this case," Dr. Servatius said, "because there are German courts available and within our reach that are ready to try, as was done in similar cases and in similar circumstances."

Dr. Servatius also attacked the district court's ruling that it had its authority from the universal character of the crime. He said the precedents cited by the court were of offenses perpetrated against the laws of the state, but in Eichmann's case the acts were done in accordance with the will of the state.

The defense counsel contended that Eichmann had been misrepresented as an important figure in the Nazi regime with the power to take initiative and act in accordance with his own will when it ran counter to orders from above.

Eichmann was a lieutenant colonel in the Nazi security police. As head of the Jewish affairs section, he directed the rounding up and transportation of millions of Jews to Nazi annihilation camps, says the New York Times. Dr. Servatius maintained that Eichmann had acted under orders that were "absolutely incontestable."

The defense counsel said that Eichmann had received a fair trial in Israel, but he said the three judges might have been prejudiced subconsciously as Jews and influenced by publicity that portrayed Eichmann as the central figure in the Nazi program.

"There is no doubt that sincere efforts were made by the judges to rise above personal feeling that might conflict with their objective opinions," Dr. Servatius said, "but even sincere efforts are subject to psychological limitations." The Supreme Court Justices hearing the appeal are: Yitzhok Olshan, president of the court; Simon Agranat, Moshe Silber, Yoel Sussmann, and Dr. A. Witkon, as already listed.

Dr. Hans Globke, Secretary of State in the Chancellery, declined to comment on a request that he appear as a witness in the Eichmann appeal before the Israeli Supreme Court.

An aide to Dr. Globke, who despite recurrent criticism has always been backed by Chancellor Adenauer said that even if the Secretary of State wanted to testify he could not do so without the Chancellor's permission, says the New York Times. Such permission was thought to be extremely unlikely.

Adolf Eichmann battled for his life as the Israeli Supreme Court began hearing his appeal against the death sentence for complicity in the war-time murder of millions of Jews, says the New York Herald Tribune. The day's session was marked by the dogged presentation of a highly legalistic defense, the lively participation of the convicted man himself and the peppery questioning by the extremely well informed justices.

The five-man court had Eichmann's counsel, Dr. Robert Servatius, of Cologne, groping for words at its members asked questions about details, dates, incidents, conflicting evidence and concepts.

On such occasions Eichmann, pallid, nervous but totally attentive in his glass prisoner's box, hastily scribbled notes in a big, bold hand and had them passed to his counsel.

The counsel's arguments amounted to the same case he had presented to the District Court — that Israeli courts were incompetent to try Eichmann, that he was only a small cog who had to obey orders, that he did not plot the destruction of the Jews.

But Dr. Servatius offered two surprises:

One, a request that Dr. Hans Globke, West German State Secretary and a close associate of Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, labelled a Nazi war criminal by the East Germans, be called as an expert witness. Dr. Globke, as an Interior Ministry official, wrote a "commentary" on the anti-Jewish Nuerenberg laws which, his defendants in Bonn contend, was more liberal than the racial laws themselves.

Two, a statement that the defense would seek through West German courts to force the Bonn government to "take steps against the kidnapping of the accused" and against his trial "before an unauthorized court."

If this fails, Dr. Servatius said, the defense would turn to the United Nations Commission on Human Rights on the grounds that Eichmann's freedom as an individual had been impaired, says the New York Herald Tribune. The questioning by the justices pushed Dr. Servatius into at least one important concession.

Dr. Servatius provoked the court into cold anger when he dealt with the deportation of children from the Czech village of Lidice, destroyed by the Nazis in retaliation for the assassination of SS Nazi Elite Guard leader, Reinhard Heydrich.

"This does not concern Jewish children, but Czech children," Dr. Servatius said. "The authority of the Israeli courts does not exist in this case."

Justice Yitzhok Olshan, the court president, sharply interrupted with, "Does the difference of blood between races still exist?"

It was not a matter of racial discrimination, Dr. Servatius replied. Israel's Nazi punishment law, under which Eichmann was tried, "clearly stipulated that persons are to be punished who per-

Mr. and Mrs. H. Wexler, 5779 Wentworth Avenue, gave a dinner and dance, with one hundred guests, in the Persian Room, of Ruby Foo's, to celebrate the sixteenth birthday of their daughter, Estelle; sister of Shelley Rose, aged three years; granddaughter of Mrs. Dora Nudelman, 4915 Maplewood Avenue. Mrs. Wexler wore an off-white brocaded sheath; and had a corsage of purple orchids. Mrs. Nudelman was in a black silk sheath; with a corsage of white carnations. Estelle wore a white dress; with a bouquet of red Sweetheart roses. A pink and white birthday cake, with pink and white carnations, trimmed the table.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Meltzer, 5795 Darlington Avenue, were hosts to thirty-five guests at a cocktail party at their home to celebrate the engagement of their daughter, Miss Hazel Meltzer, to Abraham H. Cohen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cohen, 5975 Wilderton Avenue. Mrs. Meltzer wore a beige, shantung sheath; and had a corsage of pink carnations. Mrs. Cohen was in a gold-coloured, peau de soie sheath; and had a corsage of gold-coloured roses. Miss Meltzer wore an off-white, tunic-styled, silk, knitted sheath; with a corsage of mauve orchids. The table flowers were pink gladioli, carnations and roses. Mrs. S. Pont, and Mrs. A. Meltzer, grandmothers of the bride-to-be, poured the beverages.

Mrs. Max Weinstein, 2640 Bedford Road, and Mrs. Eugene Herskovits, 5806 Somerled Avenue, gave a luncheon with sixty-five guests present, at 6445 Decarie Boulevard, in honour of the former's daughter, Miss Yetta Weinstein, and the fiancee of the latter's son, Claude Moskovic. Mrs. Weinstein wore a black silk sheath; and had a corsage of red roses. Mrs. Herskovits was in a black silk and lace sheath; with a corsage of white roses. Miss Yetta Weinstein wore a beige, knitted suit; and her flowers were a corsage of green orchids. The table centerpiece was composed of mixed spring flowers. The marriage will take place on June 17, at Chevra T'Hilim Synagogue.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Goldman, 2725 Maplewood Avenue, gave a dinner party, with forty-five guests, at Green's Restaurant to celebrate the fortieth wedding anniversary of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Goldman, 7397 Chester Avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Goldman, have two sons and daughters-in-law: Professor and Mrs. Carl Goldman, 7396 Chester Avenue; Mr. and Mrs. Max Goldman; two sons-in-law and daughters: Dr. and Mrs. Mark Francoeur (Pearl), 48 Eighty-Ninth Avenue, Chomedey; Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Hornstein (Sarah), 7387 Chester Avenue; and twelve grandchildren: Mindy, daughter of Professor and Mrs. Carl Goldman; Linda, Stephen, and Richard, children of Mr. and Mrs. Max Goldman; Michal, Daniel, Andre, Alex, and Rene Francoeur; and Marlene, Alan, and Ralph Hornstein. Mrs. Max Goldman wore a white, knitted, wool suit, with a bodice trimmed with vertical lines of pearl-beadwork; and had a corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Frank Goldman wore a magenta-red, silk sheath, made with a round neckline, and rhinestone clips; and had a corsage of white roses. An anniversary cake with pink and white carnations and white, lighted tapers trimmed the table. Mr. Goldman proposed a toast to his parents and to peace in the world. Those who spoke in tribute to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Goldman were Mrs. Max Goldman, Professor and Mrs. Carl Goldman, Mrs. Mark Francoeur, K. Goldman, Mrs. Rubin Agensky, and Mrs. A. Goldmann. At the same time the birthday of Richard, youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Max Goldman, who was two years old on March 15, was celebrated. There was a yellow birthday cake, with blue candles. Linda and Stephen Goldman, and Marlene Hornstein gave readings in Jewish and English; sang, and danced ballet. Linda made the presentation of gifts to her grandparents.

ONCE AGAIN, EICHMANN PLEADING FOR HIS LIFE BEFORE FIVE SUPREME COURT JUDGES IN JERUSALEM

assuted the Jewish people and not the Czech people."

Simon Agranat, a Kentucky-born justice who speaks Hebrew with an American accent, retorted that the persecution of a civilian population was in question and that was "a crime against humanity."

The plundering legions of the Nazis and the Fascists stripped the Jews of Europe of $27 billion in property, assets and income, even selling the clothing and the gold from the teeth of those murdered in concentration camps.

Several Jewish communities had to pay Germany for bullets used to kill their fellow Jews, and for urns holding the ashes of deported and gassed leaders.

The Nazis took 17 tons of gold from the teeth of Jews murdered in gas chambers or shot to death. They robbed the Jews of everything from real estate and businesses to jewelry, furniture, and money, says the New York Herald Tribune. Many times, after plucking their Jewish victims clean of every article they owned, the Nazis forced them to transfer all their foreign holdings to the Reich under threat of death.

The Nazis used every method in the tyrant and gangster book to get their hands on Jewish property — confiscation, boycott, pillage, ransom, murder, huge taxes levied on whole communities and all varieties of extortion.

Of the $27 billion extorted from Jewish people, only $6 billion has been paid back in reparations, restitution, and compensation to the survivors of the six million Jews whom the Nazis and Fascists murdered in a little more than ten years.

These estimates were printed in a pamphlet, "Spoliation and Remedial Action," by Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, director of the Institute of Jewish Affairs of the World Jewish Congress. The values given were those applicable at the time the property was grabbed, and would be 60 to 70 per cent higher today than the $27 billion estimate.

Besides the actual property taken, Dr. Robinson said, the amount of lost income ranges between $10 billion and $15 billion.

At the end of 1961, compensation claims in West Germany totalled 3,071,662, and 2,200,000 cases have been adjudicated.

Of the restitution measures, he said: "Nowhere were the remedies as complete as the spoliation. In most cases they were restricted to restoration of the alienated or confiscated property which was still available at the time of restitution, leaving unrecompensed the values of dissolved enterprises and the damages inflicted on returnable property, failing to provide remuneration for non-receivable assets."

The WJC, representing Jewish communities in 64 countries, says the New York Herald Tribune, was the group which at the end of World War II made the estimate that six million Jews had died under the Nazis and Fascists.

"In general," Dr. Robinson said, "spoliation was carried out — at least in theory — in two stages: (a) the period of anti-Jewish legislative measures; although this legislation was frequently accompanied by extra-legal acts, these were exception rather than the rule; (b) the period of total Jewish disfranchisement, when everything that was left from the first period was seized and utilized by administrative action.

"In practice, the two 'stages' were not infrequently only two aspects of the same measures. Even in Germany, where the semblance of 'legality' was the greatest, the 1933 boycott and, in particular, the 1938 pogroms coincided in time with the 'legal' measures of spoliation. In Austria, extra-legal measures were applied from the start: looting and extortions, as well as deportations from the provinces followed by loss of assets, already caused considerable material losses at an early time.

"As in the case of the general treatment of the Jews, the extra-legal measures in this field were intensified after the start of the war. In Poland, plunder and looting of Jewish businesses and homes was the order of the day from the start of the invasion and before any legislative action was taken or even possible.

"Expulsion of Jewish populations from the Polish regions which were incorporated into the Reich, and certain other places in Poland, resulted in the total abandonment of the Jewish assets, except for the most necessary belongings which could be carried away. The flight before the invader both in the West and in the East had the same effect.

"At the same time spoliation on the basis of laws and decrees went on everywhere. The deportations and later the annihilation of Jews from and in all countries under German domination or influence represented, from the viewpoint of spoliation, the ultimate in extent because, as we shall see, whatever the deportees were still able to carry with them was seized and utilized by the Nazi when the Jews were murdered."

When spoliation was complete, Dr. Robinson pointed out, the Nazi conquerors were not yet through. Forced labor resulted, says the New York Herald Tribune. Then came ransom, in which the Nazis, desperately needing foreign exchange, permitted Dutch and Slovak Jews to emigrate upon the payment of huge sums. There also were payments to stay deportation. The deportations achieved the ultimate, which was accomplished in three stages: "resettlement," transfer to an annihilation camp, and extermination.

"The prevailing lawlessness bred widespread extortions, some semi-legal," Dr. Robinson said. "In Romania, for example, Jews were forced to pay billions of lei in gratuities to officials. In Slovakia tens of thousands of dollars were paid surreptitiously to avoid deportation. The same was done in Yugoslavia. In Poland, faked identity cards were a source of Jewish despoliation. The semi-legal "Kennkarten," supplied since 1942 by municipal officials, cost from 2,000 to 5,000 zlotys apiece."

Describing one example of spoliation at the time of the resettlement in Poland, Dr. Robinson cited the order of the Supreme Mayor of Lodz requiring Jews to place at the disposal of the ghetto administration of the city all their machines, reichsmarks, foreign exchange, coins, jewels, textiles, leather, and other raw materials, while the disposal of house furnishings and food was undertaken by the city's commissary.

In Hungary, special committees were established to lock and seal Jewish apartments and shops. Perishable objects and animals were seized by municipal officials, says the New York Herald Tribune. Money, securities, gold and silverware were transferred to the National Bank.

Deported Jews were permitted to take with them the clothes they were wearing, two changes of underwear and a small amount of luggage that included mattresses and blankets. They were subjected to a rigid physical search. When they arrived at the concentration camps, everything was seized.

"The arrivals in Auschwitz had to deposit their belongings before passing through the showers," Dr. Robinson said. "When they passed, everything deposited vanished. Eyewitnesses testified to large quantities of gold collected within two days in Belzec. There were, in addition, dollar bills, diamonds and other valuables. In Treblinka, veritable mountains of suitcases, textiles, underwear, etc., were collected.

"Nothing was too small for them (the Nazis), not even the hair of the victims: the hair of all women, before being sent to the gas chamber, was cut and put into sacks to be used for the war effort; hair of men was also used. In one reported case alone six carloads containing 3,000 kilos (a kilo is about two pounds) of human hair were dispatched.

"Gold fillings in the teeth were wrenched and used either for SS

MONTREAL MEETINGS

★Dr. Allan L. Sherwin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Sherwin, 4580 Kensington Avenue, has been named the recipient of a Markle Scholarship, including a $30,000 grant. One of two Canadians to be so honored, Dr. Sherwin was interviewed for three days at a club near Ottawa when about a dozen candidates were given a close look by men from the United States and Canada in fields unrelated to medicine. Prospective Markle Scholars may not apply on their own for this scholarship. They must be recommended by a medical school to the authorities, and then they are scrutinized for the final decision. Dr. Sherwin is at present carrying on research on the allergic aspects of diseases of the nervous system. The Markle Award of $30,000 goes to McGill University Faculty of Medicine, to supplement Dr. Sherwin's program of research. A former pupil of West Hill High School and a graduate of Montreal West High School, Allan Sherwin graduated from McGill with a Bachelor of Science degree, and first class honors in biochemistry, in 1953; and in medicine from McGill in 1957. He trained in neurology at the Montreal Neurological Institute and in Immuno-Chemistry at the Division of Immuno-Chemistry and Allergy Research of the Royal Victoria Hospital, in Montreal.

CLASS IN COOKERY

LIVER ENTREE FOR PASSOVER

two medium potatoes
two stalks of celery
two large onions
two hard-cooked eggs
salt to taste

Bake liver until done. Fry sliced onions in a little oil until they change color and are well done. Through a meat grinder put in first liver and onions, potatoes, eggs, and celery last. Chop fine, adding either chicken soup or water saved from the potatoes. This can be done several days in advance and placed in freezer, except do not add salt until ready to serve. For cooking the eggs, keep water just under boiling to keep them tender, for twenty minutes.

Mrs. Hyman Margolese,
5704 Leger Avenue, Montreal.

KASHA PUDDING

three cups cooked kasha
one-half teaspoon salt, or less one-half cup butter
two and one-quarter cups milk
one cup seedless raisins
one-half cup sugar
one-quarter cup brown sugar three eggs
one teaspoon baking powder
one teaspoon vanilla

Mix kasha, brown and white sugar, salt, melted butter, eggs, baking powder, and raisins; add milk, and vanilla. With melted shortening grease a pan, eight inches by twelve inches. Pour in mixture, and bake at 375 degrees for one hour, until brown.

Molly Picon's
MISH-MASH

Now that I'm on Broadway, my friends ask me, "What's the difference between Broadway and Second Avenue?" I answer them in one word. "Money." On Broadway, everything's a production. For instance, the musical I'm in now, "Milk and Honey," they tell me cost $400,000 before the curtain even went up. On Second Avenue, we would have been happy to take IN that much at the end of a long successful run.

Which reminds me of a story my cousin used to tell. Her husband never made more than a modest living. Once, after having had dinner at his boss's house, he came home raving. "You should see the house Mr. Werner lives in. And food. Is his wife a cook! She made a tzimis (that's a Jewish souffle) out of eggs and honey and cream and cheese and raisins. Why can't you cook like that?" To which my cousin replied, "I can. Just give me money for eggs." "Leave out the eggs," he cried. "But I have to buy the honey," she said. "Who needs honey?" Well, as you've guessed by now, she was forced to make the tzimis wihout the eggs, honey, cream, cheese and raisins. When she put it in front of him he took one taste and said, "Pfui! This is what rich people eat?"

I've often wondered what my poor cousin did put into that tzimis. You know, you can't make something out of nothing. The more I serve Rokeach Gefilte Fish, the more I realize it. Believe me, there's a dish that's something. Naturally, Rokeach doesn't skimp on ingredients. They use only fresh-caught whitefish, carp and pike . . . the very finest. Then it's seasoned and cooked just right, and you get it with plenty of that jelled broth for which Rokeach is so famous. Who ever heard of a traditional Friday night dinner without gefilte fish? Or, for that matter, without chicken soup with matzo balls? That's another wonderful Rokeach specialty. But don't get me started. Like any woman, I never know when to stop.

★ BAR-MITZVAH FOUNDATION ★

Murray Koffler, 28 Beechwood Avenue, has introduced a fund whereby gift certificates of any denomination can be obtained for bar-mitzvah boys, bat-mitzvahs girls, and confirmation graduates, to enable them, at the age of sixteen, to join a six-week, all-expense-paid tour, on KLM Royal Dutch Airlines, during July and August in Israel, with stop-overs in London, Amsterdam, Rome, and Athens. A boy or girl who begins training for bar-mitzvah, or bat-mitzvah, may register with the Foundation, at 150 Beverley Street; the Rabbi, or director of education, at his Synagogue, or Hebrew School. The donor's name will be inscribed on the certificate, and will be recorded in a gift book. Patron of the Bar-Mitzvah Foundation is His Excellency, Arthur Lourie, Ambassador of Israel, to the Court of St. James's, in London, England. The board of directors is: Murray Koffler, chairman; Rabbi Reuben Slonim, national director; Alex C. Fisher, Samuel Klener, Albert J. MARRIAGES

WOLFE-GOODMAN

The marriage of Miss Donna Judith Goodman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Goodman, 499 Rushton Road, to Irving Wolfe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wolfe, 181 Borden Street, was solemnized at Adath Israel Synagogue, on March 4, at six o'clock, by Rabbi Erwin Schild, assisted by Cantor Murray Nixon. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown of white bridal satin had a fitted bodice; beaded, scooped neckline; three-quarter-length sleeves; and an A-line skirt, with bustle back, shaping into a chapel train. Her elbow-length veil of tulle illusion, was topped by a matching pill-box hat, with seed-pearl beads; and she carried an orchid and stephanotis on a Bible. Mrs. J. Charendoff, cousin of the bride, was matron of honour. Miss Brenda Chousky was maid of honour. Each wore a gown of pale-blue chiffon; with lace bodice; and scooped neckline. The bridesmaids were: Misses Karen Simon, cousin of the bride, of Hamilton, Ont.; Marilyn Sherman, and Jean Fogle. They wore similar gowns, in pale-blue, with high necklines. All had matching cabbage-rose headdresses, with veils; and their flowers were carnations, tinted blue. Penny Wolfe, cousin of the groom, was flower girl, wearing a dress of pale-blue organza, with lace; and a blue headdress of organza flowers; and carrying a nosegay of blue carnations. Lawrence Wolfe, cousin of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Howard Pilsmaker; Howard, and Larry Simon, of Hamilton, Ont.; all cousins of the bride; Sol, and Arnold Unger, and Howard, and Gary Tward. Leonard Tepperman, cousin of the groom, was ringbearer. The wedding music was played by Morris Turk, and his orchestra. Two hundred and seventy people were received at a dinner, at Torah Emeth Synagogue. Mrs. Goodman, mother of the bride, wore a gown of beige, silk shantung; with sheath front, and full flared back. It had cap sleeves; and heavy beadwork around the scooped neckline. Her headdress was a matching pill-box. Mrs. Wolfe, mother of the groom, wore a gown of beige, silk shantung; with beaded bodice; and full skirt; also a matching headdress. Each had a pink orchid corsage. Mr. and Mrs. Irving Wolfe motored to New York for their honeymoon. The bride went away in a gold-coloured, wool suit; with A-line skirt; and a short jacket; and had a hat of black straw with gold-coloured flower; and a white orchid corsage. They are residing at 3638 Bathurst Street. Here for the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. M. Simon, of Hamilton, Ont.; uncle and aunt of the bride; Lawrence Albert, of New York, cousin of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Horovitz, Mrs. Malia Horovitz, and Mrs. Esther Horovitz; all of Windsor, Ont.; and Mr. and Mrs. William Finkelstein, of Detroit, Mich.; all cousins of the groom.

Social Upheavals And New, Violent Nationalism All Over Threaten Jewish Survival

The effect of social revolution and the danger of assimilation today pose the most serious threats to Jewish survival, Dr. Nahum Goldmann, of New York, president of the World Jewish Congress, told Jewish leaders gathered at Mexico City for the first Mexico-Central American-Caribbean regional conference of the Congress. He called for the fullest possible cooperation of the region's communities through the World Jewish Congress in order that Jewry might cope with its grave problems and secure its survival.

Dr. Goldmann addressed a public session in the Jewish Sports Club attended by about 1,000 members of the Mexican Jewish community, and representatives of these communities: Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Guatemala, Jamaica, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Surinam, and Venezuela.

The conference also heard a demand, voiced by Yehuda Ebstein, of New York, executive director of the North American Executive, that Interpol, the International Police Organization, place Nazi criminals still at large high on its Wanted list.

The delegates were welcomed by Dr. S. Bibring, president of the Central Jewish Committee of Mexico; Dr. Mordechai Schneerson, Israeli Ambassador to Mexico; and by the leaders of a number of major Mexican Jewish groups. Greetings from Samuel Bronfman, chairman of the North American Executive; and from Dr. Moises Goldman, chairman of the South American Executive, were conveyed by Mrs. Ebstein, and by Marc Turkow, of Buenos Aires, executive director of the South American Executive. The delegation from Surinam conveyed the good wishes of that country's Prime Minister, S. D. Emanuels.

In his address, Dr. Goldmann said that there had been radical changes in the Jewish position as compared with last century, or even until the middle of the 20th century. Then the three main issues, all of which had lost their significance or had changed in character, had been:

1. The fight against anti-Semitism and the denial of equal rights.
2. Alleviating the miserable conditions in which millions of Jews had existed.
3. The struggle for the establishment of Israel.

Jewish emancipation, Dr. Goldmann said, had been achieved in nearly all countries of the world and although anti-Semitism continued in many areas, it had lost much of its sharpness and violence and, at present, did not seriously endanger the Jewish position. Poverty was no longer characteristic for the majority of the Jewish people whose economic position in most countries was satisfactory and, as for the fight for a Jewish homeland, the creation of the State of Israel had put an end to that.

In place of anti-Semitism, two new developments, characteristic of the present world situation, endangered Jewish life in most parts of the globe. One was the social upheavals taking place, or which may take place, in many parts of the world which are socially unbalanced and susceptible to such revolutions. These revolutions, although not anti-Jewish in any way, may, because of their social and economic consequences, ruin flowering Jewish communities, as had been the case in Cuba. Thousands of Cuban Jews have emigrated, cutting the former 10,000 Jewish population to between 5,000 and 6,000.

In other countries, Dr. Goldmann said, a new violent nationalism was rampant which did not deny equality of rights to Jewish citizens, but did not grant them the right and facilities to live their distinct Jewish life. The most significant example for this trend was the 3,000,000 Soviet Jews whose position as equal citizens was not threatened by any kind of an official anti-Semitism but who were, de facto, denied the possibility to maintain their Jewish character and distinct life.

Jewish poverty was no longer central in Jewish life, but another, much graver, danger had developed: assimilation as a result of the disappearance of anti-Semitic persecution, increased political integration, and the economic progress of most Jewish communities. The process of growing indifference among the young generation represented the most latent danger, Dr. Goldmann stated, to Jewish survival in the Diaspora and made the question of Jewish education, of securing the Jewishness of the young generation, the number one problem in Jewish Diaspora life.

To deal with all these problems, he said that Jewish unity and the full cooperation of all sectors of the Jewish people as expressed in the World Jewish Congress was more essential today than at any time before. Latin American Jewry, which Dr. Goldmann called one of the most conscious and Jewish-minded parts of the Jewish people, had to play a leading role in uniting Jewry in order that it might cope with its grave problems and secure its survival.

Emphasizing the value of unity within the Jewish communities of the world, Mr. Ebstein said that the World Jewish Congress was engaged in a mighty search for witnesses to testify against Nazis now being brought to trial in Germany and Austria. Through the help of the organization's affiliated communities in 64 lands, the search had secured 500 or more witnesses from all over the world, through its global network to find people able and willing to come forward to give evidence.

In a number of cases evidence so collected had been responsible for the capture and trial of other Nazis whose crimes were not known to the prosecuting authorities or who had been hiding out under assumed names. Mr. Ebstein said the World Jewish Congress contended that Interpol should play a part in the round-up of Nazi criminals. The international police organization did not act because of a clause in its constitution preventing it from intervening "in matters which have a political, military, religious, or racial character."

The World Jewish Congress believed that the massacre of 6,000,000 European Jews could be termed nothing but criminal and the perpetrators should be placed high on Interpol's Wanted list. "There is no doubt in our minds that Interpol could help the West German authorities to bring more Nazis to trial. Interpol inactivity has, in fact, hampered the German authorities in their investigations," Mr. Ebstein said.

He said he hoped the delegates would urge their respective police authorities to intercede with Interpol. "But I must add that, to the best of our information," Mr. Ebstein said, "no Nazi criminals have knowingly been given asylum in the lands of Mexico, Central America, and the Caribbean. Indeed, it is highly unlikely that any Nazi has managed to sneak into any one of these countries."

The delegates were the guests of the Mexican Jewish community at a banquet in the Jewish Sports Club. Among the Jewish leaders present were: Mr. and Mrs. Bernardo Boruchowicz, of Costa Rica; Bruno Philipp, of the Dominican Republic; Enrique Engel, and Mr. and Mrs. David Wizel, of Guatemala; Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Matalon, of Jamaica; Laszlo Weisz, and Alfredo Storper, of Nicaragua; Moises Mizrachi, of Panama; Dr. D. H. Emanuels, and E. J. Robles, of Surinam; and a delegation from the Mexican community, headed by Dr. S. Bibring, president of the Jewish Central Committee, who was chairman of the conference, and including: Mino Covo, vice-president of the Central Committee; I. Z. Berebichez, its Secretary General; Jacobo Glanz, president of its Cultural Commission; and Julio Yasinowsky, president of the Jewish Sports Club.

(Storm Trooper) personnel or delivered to the Reichsbank. Ordinarily it was done after death, but in the Minsk prison gold bridges and fillings were removed before execution. It was estimated by competent persons that about 17 tons of gold were thus derived from the victims of the concentration camps. In Auschwitz, even things like mirrors were collected and taken away. Underwear, clothing, etc., were shipped either to Berlin or to textile plants."

For the sake of German economy, the Jews were stripped naked before being put into the gas chambers. Those on their way to the concentration camps were undressed. The same thing happened when they were shot by special squads, says the New York Herald Tribune. When deported, they were forced to pay the transportation costs.

"Cases are known where the Jewish community was forced to pay to the Germans the value of the bullets used to kill part of the community or for the urns containing the ashes of deported and gassed leaders," Dr. Robinson said.

In the fall of 1940, soon after the collapse of France, Hitler ordered the confiscation of art objects in the West. All Jewish-owned art in Jewish apartments, castles, shipping firms, and other places, was seized. Despite efforts at concealment, 79 large art collections were found; as a result, 92 railroad cars containing 2,775 cases, that included 5,255 paintings; 297 sculptures; 1,372 pieces of furniture; 307 pieces of textile art, and 2,224 other objects were removed to "safe places" in Germany, where another 10,000 objects, not yet inventoried, already reposed.

By July, 1944, a total of 203 collections, consisting of 21,093 art objects, had been packed and made ready for shipment to Germany from France, Belgium and Holland yielded comparable treasures.

This did not include books. Whole libraries, archives, etc. — 19.5 million units from France alone — were taken. (By 1946, only 1.5 million had been recovered.) Among the loot were 400,000 volumes from the library of the Alliance Israelite Universelle; 20,000 plus manuscripts of the Rosentaliana; 25,000 of the Sephardic Jewish Community in Amsterdam; 20,000 from a private collection; and 28,000 Rothschild-owned volumes.

The picture in the Eastern countries was the same.

The Council of Europe's Commission on Human Rights, to which Eichmann's defense council said he might take an appeal, was set up under the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

West Germany and all the states of Western Europe except France are parties to the convention, but Israel is not. The convention was signed in Rome in 1950 and went into force in 1953, says the New York Herald Tribune. The Commission on Human Rights hears complaints regarding human rights by both states and individual petitioners. The appeals of individuals can be considered only if the state against which the complaint has been entered has given its consent.

West Germany has allowed petitions to be brought against it.

The Commission on Human Rights does not have the right to set aside court decisions even if it upholds a petitioner's charge that the convention has been violated.

In such cases the commission takes up the case with the government concerned and tries to obtain an amicable settlement. If none is reached, the case is then referred to the Council of Ministers of the Council of Europe.

NEW IMMIGRATION REGULATIONS

The most important effect of new immigration regulations which came into force on February 1, 1962, is to make it possible for any qualified person, from any part of the world, to be considered for admission to Canada, without regard to his race, colour, national origin or the country from which he comes. The main qualifications required are education, training and skill. If a person has these qualifications and has sufficient means to maintain himself until he finds employment in Canada or, alternatively, if he is coming to approved employment or to set up a business, to establish himself in agriculture or to practise a profession, he is admissible, if in good health and of good character.

Likewise if a person has the required skills and potential ability to establish himself in Canada he may be sponsored by a parent, parent-in-law or a female fiancée already in Canada, provided the sponsor is a Canadian citizen.

In addition, Canadian citizens and persons legally admitted to Canada for permanent residence may sponsor a mother, father, husband, wife, grandparent, female fiancée or an unmarried minor child.

The classes of close relatives from Europe, North America, Central America and South America and certain countries specified in the former regulations remain unchanged.

The new immigration regulations also provide, for the first time, for all appeals to be heard by the Immigration Appeal Board at Ottawa, independently from departmental officials. In this manner the government wishes to ensure that appeals from deportation are dealt with in the most impartial manner possible and that every individual receives a fair hearing.

Persons seeking a more detailed explanation of the new immigration regulations are requested to communicate in person or in writing with the immigration officer or the citizenship liaison officer of the Department of Citizenship and Immigration nearest to their home or with the Director of Immigration at Ottawa.

Ellen L. Fairclough
